

stige of color. I know what pride appearance is hidden underneath volatile good-nature, was sure at he was suffering an agony of humiliation that the mother whom idolized should be involved in so wdry a scene. Fortunately, however, the crashing music of the jazz orchestra had effectively drowned with Rita's raucous voice and the crash of the glass. But his expression when he turned back and looked at her was as set and stern as if a whole regiment of officials were advancing toward our table. "Let's get out of this," he said, signalling to a waiter. "Check!" he commanded briefly when the man did come, and then he looked apologetically at his mother. "Sorry to hurry you, mother, dear," he said and there was a choke in his voice, an expression in his eyes that read the funeral service over any fancy he may have had for the girl who had just outraged all canons of decent breeding. "Oh, I'm quite ready to go!" little Mrs. Durkee rejoined with a grave assumption of casualness, and in a few moments more we were out in the air and rushing homeward. Rita Brown had uttered no word since the glass had left her hand. Palpably subdued she preceded us out of the cafe, punctiliously guided by Alfred Durkee, who, after that first withering look, paid her the same outward attention that he had give her on the trip over. But my heart beat fast with the hope that any power she might have had over him was gone.

(Continued Tomorrow.)

Omaha Sailor Drowns.

Chicago, Ill. June 18.—(Special Telegram).—James Lawrence Wilson, Omaha sailor just discharged from the service, was drowned in Lake Michigan last night. The body was recovered.

Negro In Winter Suit Steals a Palm Beach; Says He Was Hungry

Kansas City, Mo., June 18.—A Palm Beach suit, on a dummy in front of the store of A. Weiner, caused the downfall of Houston Williams, a negro.

"Here Ah am, with last winter's suit, and dat dummy with a Pa'm Beach cooler" mused Houston, the thermometer registering 90 in the shade. So he put the dummy under his arm, and began making quick time down the street.

"Buck" Stephenson, former "cop," who now operates a clothes cleaning shop, just across the street from the store where the dummy was, saw the performance, started in pursuit and caught the negro.

In south municipal court, Judge Fleming asked Williams:

"Why did you take that suit?"

"I wux huagry, jedge," replied Williams.

"Could you eat a Palm Beach suit?" queried the judge. Williams had no reply, so "hizzonor" said $50 fine, Houston.

Omaha Men Arrested At Falls City He Federal Auto

Six Omaha men arrested in Falls City, Neb., Tuesday with a load of whisky in three high priced automobiles pleaded guilty to the crime and were fined in Falls City court according to information received here. They will be taken to Lincoln for a hearing before the federal grand jury.

The men gave their names as L. Colwell, G. W. Colwell, Lee, James Smith, John Charles Davis.

To Hear Charges Against Palmer Next

Washington, June 18.—The hearing of charges against the administration of Attorney General Clegg as alien property custodian was decided upon by a senate subcommittee headed by Senator Dillingham, republican, of Ohio. The hearings, which Mr. Clegg requested be public, will begin Friday.

Safe Milk for INFANTS and INVALIDS

For Infants, Invalids and Growing Children | Rich milk, malted grain extract
The Original Food-Drink for All Ages | No Cooking — Nourishing