

Police and Red Coats Fight Winnipeg Strikers

City Placed Under Martial Law Following Riots in Which One Man Is Killed and Several Are Injured; Soldiers and Machine Guns Line City's Streets.

Winnipeg, June 21.—Winnipeg, strike-torn since May 15, is under martial law. After fighting between thousands of strikers and the city and provincial police, in which one man was killed, another injured, probably fatally, and more than a score hurt, Mayor Charles F. Gray formally turned over the city to the protection of federal military forces.

Gen. H. D. B. Ketchen announced that he has taken full charge of the situation. At 7 o'clock rioting had ceased and the victims of the fighting were in hospitals. Scores of alleged rioters are in custody.

Three incidents in quick succession in mid-afternoon precipitated the most turbulent scenes in the history of Winnipeg. Several thousand strikers and strike sympathizers, including some returned soldiers, were participating in a "silent" parade. A street car attempted to get through the crowd on Main street. Some of the paraders became openly hostile and when mounted police came down the street to clear the thoroughfare, the parade quickly was turned into a rioting mob.

For nearly two hours the Scarlet Riders, reinforced by returned soldiers, constables and policemen, fought the rioters. The mounted police fired at the men who attacked them and sought to pull them from their horses. Mike Sokowoki, a registered alien, fell dead with a bullet in his heart.

Bring Weapons Into Play.

When in the crowd attacking the police also brought weapons into play. Robert C. Johnson, a returned soldier, was shot in the knee. Jack Barrett, an onlooker, was shot in the thigh. Fifteen other casualties were reported. Scores of police (Continued on Page Two, Column Three.) and pedestrians were struck by bricks, clubs and other missiles, trampled by horses or knocked down by the mob.

As soon as the military took charge, order began to come out of chaos. Armored cars and troops with fixed bayonets appeared. The crowds began to disperse.

It was announced that 300 alleged rioters are in the police cells.

The troops of the Royal Northwest Mounted Police engaged, numbered only 53 men and few of these escaped without wounds or contusions. The horses suffered in like degree, one being blinded by a lump of concrete.

The street car service, in part resumed during the past three days, automatically stopped.

The street car attacked was demolished but the occupants escaped without serious injuries.

Bricks Whistle Through Air

Flames from the burning car attracted the red-coated riders and they tore into the crowd. Bricks whistled through the air. Then the policemen shot. More missiles from the rioters was the response. One horseman went down and angry demonstrators pounced upon him. His comrades drove squarely into the mass and rescued the bleeding man.

German Lost Nerve.

Following its decision to re-entente another note containing conditions regarding the immediate entrance of Germany into the league of nations, the limitation of armaments and renunciation of the efforts to have the former emperor surrendered, the German government lost its nerve for the first time since the war ended with the declaration that it was impossible otherwise to form a cabinet that would sign the peace.

Although the note was written and ready to be dispatched, it was withheld until the eleventh hour. It was feared that the entente would reject the German proposals.

Mayor Gray in the city hall notified General Ketchen. Since the strike began the mayor has had a private line to the general's headquarters. The martial law announcement followed.

Soldiers were ordered into the heart of the city and soon the crowd of demonstrators sought shelter. Armored cars with machine guns swinging from one side of the street to the other, came down town.

Mayor Gray and General Ketchen conferred after the soldiers got into action. The mayor said he hoped that the prompt and effective measures taken by the troops had sufficiently restored order, so that the period of martial law might be considered at an end Saturday, if possible. The city officials preferred to have the military continue to aid civil authorities but not to remain in complete control.

The soldiers were policing downtown sections and certain districts were marked off as military territory.

The riot act proclamation read by Mayor Gray during the trouble follows:

"Our sovereign lord, the king, charges and commands all persons being assembled immediately to disperse and peaceably to depart to their habitations or to their lawful business, upon the pain of being guilty of an offense, on conviction of which they may be sentenced to imprisonment for life. God save the king!"
